Give one team's standup an ending, for six weeks

Viraam is the last 2½ minutes of a meeting your team already holds. The team lead pastes one link into the standup invite; at the set time everyone opens it and the same short close starts for all of them, in English, हिंदी or मराठी. HR has nothing to run.

What your people get

- One link in the invite. No app, no account, no install.
- 2½ minutes: stand if you can, neck, shoulders, wrists, eyes, then "When this ends, I'll first...".
- Everyone starts together from the clock; late joiners land in the right step.
- "Something hurts" stops it and points to help (112). Nobody is told.

What you get

- A Friday email, 9:00 IST: days it ran and how many joined, per team. Never names.
- A launch kit: the employee note, a channel line and a calendar hold, ready to copy.
- A 15-minute check at week 3 and a one-page report at week 6, including "stop" if that is the honest answer.

How the six weeks run

Week 0
15-minute kickoff. Team code agreed. DPA signed. The team lead pastes the link.

Weeks 1–5
The close runs at the end of each standup. No follow-up to employees, ever.

Week 3
Check the counts. Change the time or the note if needed.

Week 6
Written report: use, return, cost, recommendation. You decide.

How we'll judge it

PROPOSED TARGETS, AGREED WITH YOU BEFORE WE START

Question	Measure	Target
Does the team keep running it?	Days the close ran, out of standup days, in week 6	At least 3 of 5
Do people join?	Average joined per run, as a share of the team	At least half
Do they finish?	Finished, out of started	At least 7 in 10
Is it safe?	"Something hurts" always stops the close and offers no more movement	Every time

If the targets aren't met, the week-6 report will say so plainly.

Privacy, in plain English

- Two counts per team: sessions started and finished. No names, no devices.
- Teams with fewer than 10 sessions in a week are never shown.
- What people type, and anything about pain, never leaves their screen.
- No automatic renewal: if you do nothing at week 6, the counts are deleted.

What we need from you

- One team (10 or more people) with a daily standup, and one sender.
- Fifteen minutes at kickoff, week 3 and week 6.
- No roster, HRIS, SSO or IT ticket.

Price

Free for the first six teams. After the pilot, ₹1,499 per team per month. No setup fee, no annual contract.

Before the first paid month

The moves and safety messages will be reviewed by a physiotherapist, and the Hindi and Marathi text by native speakers. Neither review has happened yet. There are no customers yet; any figures on the site marked "sample" are illustrative.

Next step: create your team's link, or a 15-minute call to agree the targets.
